*Drivers' Hours and Tachographs: Buses and Coaches Driver Standards.*2020-03-05 Rules on drivers' hours and tachographs for passenger vehicles in Great Britain and Europe. This guide gives general guidance about drivers' and tachograph rules for passenger carrying vehicles. It reflects the Driver and Vehicle Standards Agency's current enforcement policy. It does not reflect the interpretation of the law in other countries. This guide provides advice to drivers and operators of passenger vehicles, whether used privately or commercially. It explains the rules for drivers' hours and the keeping of records, and updates previous guidance from 2011. The EU regulations also place a responsibility on others in the passenger transport industry such as tour organisers, contractors, sub-contractors and driver agencies. People working in these sectors of the passenger transport industry may benefit from an understanding of the guidance offered here. Those who are involved in international operations are advised to check whether the other country or countries in which they operate produce equivalent guidance. We recommend that you contact the relevant embassy. As with any legislation, previous and future court judgments may assist interpretation on a particular point. Where significant court judgments on interpretation are relevant, these have been incorporated in the text. Some important judgments are available - many in shortened form - in legal reference books held by larger reference libraries. If you are in doubt as to how these rules apply to you, seek your own legal advice. Within Great Britain (GB), either GB domestic or European Union (EU) rules may apply. For international journeys, either the EU rules or the European Agreement Concerning the Work of Crews of Vehicles Engaged in International Road Transport (AETR) may apply. Which set of rules applies depends on the type of driving and the type of vehicle being used and, in the case of international journeys, the countries to be visited. The carriage by road of passengers, by most vehicles that are constructed or permanently adapted for carrying more than nine people including the driver, and that are intended for that purpose, falls within the scope of the EU rules. Temporary removal of seats to less than nine including the driver will not take a vehicle out of scope of EU rules. Public service vehicle A public service vehicle (PSV) is a motor vehicle that is adapted to carry more than eight passengers and is used to carry passengers for hire or reward or, if adapted to carry eight or fewer passengers is used to carry passengers, for hire or reward at separate fares in the course of a business of carrying passengers. Regular serviceA regular service (which includes special regular services) is a service that provides for the carriage of passengers at specified intervals along a specified route, passengers being picked up and set down at predetermined stopping points. It does not have to be a service for the general public. It may be a service provided exclusively for a particular category of passenger (eg it may take children to and from school or workers to and from work). A service may be varied according to the needs of those concerned and still remain a regular service. For any journey to an EU or European Economic Area (EEA) country or Switzerland the EU rules will apply to the whole journey. For any journey to or through an AETR country the AETR rules will apply to the whole journey. See the list, EU, AETR and EEA, below to help identify which rules apply to which country. Vehicles with fewer than eight passenger seats travelling through other countries must obey the relevant domestic rules.
